General Information & Guidelines for Contributors

IPJ, in publication since 2003, is a joint initiative of the PS and the PBNI that aims to:

- Provide a forum for sharing evidence-based theory and practice, increasing all-island co-operation and learning, and informing national and international criminological debate
- Reflect the views of all those interested in criminal justice in an effort to protect the public and to provide humane and constructive responses to the harm caused by crime
- Publish high-quality material that is accessible to a wide readership.

IPJ encourages and facilitates a diversity of perspectives and welcomes submissions that enhance the reader's appreciation of difference, promote anti-discriminatory values and use neutral and person-centred language.

Preliminary Consultation: If you are considering a draft submission, one of the co-editors or a member of the editorial committee will be pleased to discuss and provide observations. The committee is also happy to provide mentoring and support to practitioners who wish to submit an article.

Submissions: Contributions are invited from practitioners, academics and policymakers. IPJ welcomes submissions from the wider justice arena, e.g. prisons, police, victim support, juvenile justice, community projects and voluntary organisations.

Submissions (in MS Word attachment) should be sent to either of the co-editors, Lisa Maginnis, PBNI, lisa.maginnis@probation-ni.gov.uk and Ursula Fernée, PS, ufernee@probation.ie Originality: Submissions will be considered on the understanding that they are original papers that have not been published or accepted for publication elsewhere. This does not exclude submissions that have had limited or private circulation, e.g. in the writer's local area, or as a conference paper or presentation.

IRISH PROBATION JOURNAL is a peer-reviewed publication. Once an article is submitted, a link person from the editorial committee is appointed to liaise with the author. All submissions are reviewed by the editorial committee with input from members of the expert advisory panel as required. The final decision to publish or reject is taken by the editors, informed by the recommendations received.

The following types of submission are considered:

Full-Length Articles: Normally articles of 5,000–7,000 words, including references, will be considered.

Practice Pieces: Shorter practice pieces are very welcome. They offer an opportunity to describe a recent piece of practice, practice-related issues or recent practice developments. Ideally around 2,000–3,000 words including references; 4,000 words maximum.

Practitioner Response: Ideally around 1,000–1,500 words including references; 2,500 words maximum. This is an opportunity for those directly linked to service delivery to respond to a recently published article in IPJ, and discuss its significance and implications for practice.

Comment Piece: Ideally around 1,000–2,000 words, this is an opportunity to express individual opinions on topics that are appropriate for IPJ.

Book Review: We welcome reviews (400–1,000 words) of recently published relevant books that are selected and commissioned by the editorial committee but may also be selected by readers.

More detailed guidelines for contributors are available from the editorial committee on request.
